

Leading a Culture of Agency in Preschool

Program outline

Welcome to the Orbis Leading a Culture of Agency in Preschool program

Building a genuine culture of agency requires intentional leadership. It is a deliberate focus on the environments, relationships, routines and practices that shape how every child experiences belonging, participation and learning every day.

This program gives you the tools, frameworks, and collaborative space to examine and strengthen your preschool's learning culture from the inside out.

You'll be challenged to think differently, explore ideas and test boundaries. Your learning will be practical, relevant to your context, and strengthened through ongoing reflection.

The learning

Learning outcomes:

- examine how environments, relationships, routines and pedagogical practices shape learner's experiences of belonging, participation, engagement and learning
- draw on contemporary research to understand the conditions and practices that enable genuine agency
- gain practical strategies that you can apply to increase learner agency
- lead an inquiry-based approach to identify, trial and evaluate pedagogical practices within your site
- apply leadership practices that promote shared responsibility, collaborative inquiry, and reflective practice to sustain a culture of agency and continuous improvement within your context.

Program elements:

- 2 face-to-face program days at Orbis
- one hour support 'coaching' session focused on applying your learning in your context
- key resources via MS Teams.

Applied learning activities

Applied learning is key to improving your leadership practice. During the program you will review an aspect of your site to keep your learning grounded in real world scenarios. An online opportunity to share your learnings and receive feedback from our facilitator will be scheduled during the program.
